Skills/ objectives:
Students get acquainted with the history of world and national religions while getting an insight into religious and sociocultural specificity of the Krasnoyarsk region.
- One of the basic disciplines of religious studies is the history of religion. As a part of the discipline, students examine how did religion originate and develop, as well as the specifics of the sociocultural links of a particular religion. In the beginning, the concept of the earliest forms of religion is formed, then the idea of the national and world religions. Scientific researches and results in this area are widely used by historians, culturologists, art historians, psychologists, and ethnographers.
- Philosophy of Religion is a complex discipline, which researches are dedicated to the philosophical understanding of nature, essence and meaning of religion, and the area of the sacred.
- Psychology of the Religion: this discipline focuses on the studies of the genesis of religious beliefs and religious behaviour, as well as related practices. The accent is put on the psychology of a religious person, their feelings and experiences.
- Phenomenology of Religion studies religious phenomena. The main objective of researchers is a formation of the concept of a particular religion as it exists, without ideological or attitudinal biases.
- Sociology of Religion examines religion as a social phenomenon, in other words, the way it interacts with the society, influences social behaviour of a particular person, groups or wholes societies.
- Theory and Methodology of Religious Studies allows students to get acquainted with and practise different methods of studying religion.
- Such disciplines as Religious Art or History and Theory of Visual Arts give the idea of the principal stages, periods and styles in art history and help to develop the skills of visual thinking.
